Thoroughly Cursed. There was an immense amount of kicking on Monroe and Canal streets yesterday on account of the sait that the Street Railway company has been using. The snow was in a mealy conan and stuck to everything. sidewalks were disgustingly dirty and the mud and slime were tracked into all the hotels and stores. It was impusable to keep anything clean, and the floors of some of the larger business houses were almost affoat in spite was ruining the feet of their horses, and the street car company was thoroughly and systematically abused. General Manager Chapman was out of the city, but Secretary Hanchett said: These persons that are kicking do not know what they are talking ab ut. We are not using a pound more sait than is necessary. Sait costs money, but it is absolutely necessary to street car traffic this time of the year. If we did not use the salt it would be nontively unsafe to side on the cars. We should have collisions on the street and it would be impossible to control the cars on the grades. The brushes alone would not do it on a slippery icy track. If we must stop using sait we must stop running cars, that's all. I admit that the salt has not helped the sleighing on Canal and Monroe streets, but I think the safety of the public is worth more than good sleighing on two streets.'
